Blowing dust prompts health warning

Gusty winds in the San Joaquin Valley have prompted local air-pollution officials to issue a health cautionary statement through Monday evening.

Winds in the San Joaquin Valley may produce areas of localized blowing dust throughout the Valley, especially in the northern counties of San Joaquin, Stanislaus and Merced; Kings County; and western parts of Madera, Fresno, Tulare and Kern counties. Blowing dust can result in unhealthy concentrations of particulate matter 10 microns and smaller, or PM10.

"Take precautions to protect your health if you are in an area of blowing dust," said Shawn Ferreria, Senior Air Quality Specialist with the Air District.

Exposure to particle pollution can cause serious health problems, aggravate lung disease, cause asthma attacks and acute bronchitis, and increase risk of respiratory infections. In people with heart disease, short-term exposure to particle pollution has been linked to heart attacks and arrhythmias, according to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Residents throughout the San Joaquin Valley are advised to use caution through Monday evening until midnight. People with heart or lung diseases should follow their doctors' advice for dealing with episodes of unhealthy air quality. Additionally, older adults and children should avoid prolonged exposure, strenuous activities or heavy exertion. Everyone else should reduce prolonged exposure, strenuous activities or heavy exertion.

The Valley Air District covers eight counties including San Joaquin, Stanislaus, Merced, Madera, Fresno, Kings, Tulare and the San Joaquin Valley air basin portion of Kern.
