Fresno Bee, Thursday, July 11, 2013

The San Joaquin Valley Air Pollution Control District is holding a free vehicle emissions test for Fresno-area drivers on Saturday.

The emissions test will be held at the Fresno County Fairgrounds at 1121 S. Chance Ave. from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., event spokeswoman Diana Jackin said. Drivers who have owned their car for at least six months can receive the emissions test.

If the vehicle doesn't pass the test but can be repaired, the driver will receive a voucher for up to $500 in emission repairs at a participating STAR-certified smog check station.

Vehicles will be tested on a first-come, first-served basis, she said.
